Thanks, Allison.

I also noticed the long version of the AP reporter's story here:

<http://www.tri-cityherald.com/2015/01/30/3385908/regulators-oregon-logging-rules.html>

The reporter got a couple of facts wrong when he said:

- 1) NWEA "won the lawsuit". (It was settled through an agreement.)
- 2) NOAA Fisheries Service, along with EPA "filed their decision". (NMFS doesn't administer CZARA; NOS does.)

And Nina's attribution erred on the high side when she claimed that "law calls for the agencies to withhold one-third of the federal grants available under the program, which this year would work out to about $1.3 million", although she was reasonably close. So now we know where that figure stems from.

Don

Story came out late Friday in OPB. NWEA continues to cite penalties, makes a quote that Oregon should feel "humiliated", notes that Washington is also not yet fully approved, and that ag is an outstanding issue in Oregon still too.

Separately, here's the Google News list, but I'm not seeing any other "unique" stories other than what we've already seen:
